The story of the opera is drawn from Beaumarchais's comedy of like name; the scene laid in Seville.

Il Barbiere di Siviglia.

The two comedies in which Beaumarchais tells of the adventures of the barber Figaro, Seville's cunning and resourceful factotum, stand high in musical history for having inspired two operas which are acknowledged to be the finest of masterpieces in the comic genre. Out of "Une folle journée" came Mozart's "Le Nozze di Figaro"; out of "Le Barbier de Séville," Rossini's "Almaviva, ossia l'inutile Precauzione," now known the world over as "Il Barbiere di Siviglia." Mozart's opera antedates Rossini's by thirty-five years, but owes its existence to the success achieved by an earlier opera based on the Rossinian subject.

It was admiration for Paisiello's "Barbiere di Siviglia," composed for St. Petersburg in 1780, that impelled Mozart to ask Da Ponte to turn "Une folle journée" into an opera book; and it may have been Rossini's admiration for "Le Nozze di Figaro" that persuaded him to create the work which is now recognized to be so admirable a companion piece to the Mozartian comedy. On that point history is silent, however. The two Figaro operas are in truth admirably consorted companions, and though the later composition has none of the deep and tender sentiment which informs so much of Mozart's music, it has more humor and quite as much frolicsomeness and scintillant vivacity. In one respect they clasp hands in cordial union—both offer to the student the most perfect type of operatic finale that the world possesses. "The Barber" has an advantage over "Figaro" in its subject-matter. There is a livelier as well as lovelier charm in the story of Count Almaviva's adventures while outwitting Dr. Bartolo and carrying off the mischievous Rosina, than in the depiction of the Count's intrigues and suspicions after marriage. This difference is accentuated by the contrasted physiognomies of the personages that carry on the action. In "The Barber" these personages have an elemental freshness, an energy which has been dulled, and, in a sense, domesticated in "Figaro." Only in the youthful Cherubino and the arch Susanna do we find the impetuous initiative which impels the three conspirators and the opposition in "The Barber."

Beaumarchais knew how well adapted the book of "Le Barbier" was for operatic treatment; indeed, it seems that it was only because he had notions concerning the lyric drama like those which prevail to-day that he did not make an opera out of it himself. He was a musician who thought well enough of his creative capacity to compose incidental music for his dramas, but he could not persuade himself that there was any excellence in an art-form which subordinated poetry to a string of tunes, however beautiful or ingeniously combined. "He had doubts," says one writer, "on the subject of the form and general treatment of opera which, to the neglect of the melodic portion of the work ought, he considered, to be assimilated to the spoken drama of real life." A musician and poet with Wagnerian tendencies one hundred and twenty-five years ago! One who withheld operatic treatment from a subject cut out for opera because he did not know how to create and blend the elements of the true lyric drama! The spectacle is edifying. Beaumarchais's comedy met with opposition when first brought out, and so did Rossini's opera; but the reasons were not the same. "Le Barbier de Séville" is a caustic satire on the social and political conditions which prevailed in France a short time before the revolution. It flatters the plain people and castigates the nobility. For this reason its performance was forbidden by Louis XVI., but the masses, not in a mood to be trifled with in 1775, demanded it and got it. There is nothing political in Rossini's opera. Its book had the approval of the Roman censor before the composer saw it, and neither government nor people had a public pretext for attempting its suppression. The opposition was purely personal, though it cloaked itself behind an affected devotion to the venerable Paisiello, who was still alive, and his work, which was not yet out of the public mind and popular affection. The story can best be told in connection with the history of the opera.

Rossini, a young man in his twenty-fifth year, who had established a reputation with "Tancredi," "L'Italiana in Algeri" and "Il Turco in Italia," was commissioned to write two operas for the carnival season of 1816 in Rome. The first, "Torvaldo e Dorliska," was produced at the Teatro Argentina on December 26th, 1815—the first day of the carnival. On the same day Rossini signed a contract with Cesarini, the impresario of the Argentine Theatre, to deliver the first act of the second work on January 20th following. For this opera he was to receive 400 Roman scudi (say $400 American) after the first three performances, which he was to conduct at the pianoforte, as was then the custom. He seems to have had no choice in the matter of the libretto, but agreed to take anything submitted by the impresario and approved by the censor. This is indicated by the contract, but a likelier story is that the author of the libretto, Sterbini, suggested a remodeling of the opera with which Paisiello had won much of his renown. The contract provided, also, that Rossini was to have lodgings with Zamboni, a singer at the opera to whom fell the honor of being the original Figaro. Rossini went to work with more than his usual promptitude and completed the score in thirteen days. Castil-Blaze says "one month," but there is no gainsaying the evidence that the time really consumed was less than half a month. Donizetti was once asked whether he believed that Rossini had really written the opera in thirteen days. "It is very possible," was his maliciously sarcastic reply, "he is so lazy!" Lazy Rossini always was, but there is no indication of that fact in the score of "The Barber." As the day for the first performance approached, it is plain enough that either Rossini or Cesarini became apprehensive of trouble. Sterbini, the librettist, was unpopular, and Paisiello had many friends in Rome who were willing to make a fetich out of his "Barbiere," provided that they could thereby suppress the upstart composer who had dared to give a new setting to Beaumarchais's comedy. As a matter of fact, there was nothing new, nothing strange in one composer using a subject that had already served another. A few decades before, on the contrary, it was a very usual thing for composers to borrow not merely subjects but entire texts from each other. Metastasio's librettos were so much admired for the limpidity and beauty of their poetry that they were composed over and over again by the musicians of his time. His "Artaserse" was set no less than forty times, his "Adriano in Siria" twenty-six. Even Mozart resorted to him for his "Clemenza di Tito," which had already been composed by Hasse. Moreover, Rossini had four predecessors in the very work for which Paisiello's friends were preparing to condemn him. Three Germans, Benda, Elsperger and Schulz, had written "Barber" operas after Paisiello and before Rossini, and so had Isouard. Rossini did more than was to have been expected from so indolent and careless a nature. He addressed a letter to Paisiello asking permission to use the subject, and wrote a preface for the libretto in which he heaped adulation on his venerable predecessor, yet ingeniously gave the public to understand that the style of his "Barber" was antiquated. "Beaumarchais's comedy," wrote Rossini, "entitled 'The Barber of Seville, or the Useless Precaution,' is presented at Rome in the form of a comic drama under the title of 'Almaviva, ossia l'inutile Precauzione' in order that the public may be fully convinced of the sentiments of respect and veneration by which the author of the music of this drama is animated with regard to the celebrated Paisiello, who has already treated the subject under its primitive title. Himself invited to undertake this difficult task, the maestro Gioachino Rossini, in order to avoid the reproach of entering rashly into rivalry with the immortal author who preceded him, expressly required that the 'Barber of Seville' should be entirely versified anew and also that new situations should be added for the musical pieces which, moreover, are required by the modern theatrical taste entirely changed since the time when the renowned Paisiello wrote his work."

Paisiello gave his consent to the use of the subject, believing that the opera of his young rival would assuredly fail. At the same time he wrote to a friend in Rome asking him to do all in his power to compass a fiasco for the opera. The young composer's enemies were not sluggish. All the whistlers of Italy, says Castil-Blaze, seemed to have made a rendezvous at the Teatro Argentina on the night set down for the first production. Their malicious intentions were helped along by accidents at the outset of the performance. Details of the story have been preserved for us in an account written by Signora Giorgi-Righetti, who sang the part of Rosina on the memorable occasion. Garcia had persuaded Rossini to permit him to sing a Spanish song to his own accompaniment on a guitar under Rosina's balcony in the first act. It would provide the needed local color, he urged. When about to start his song, Garcia found that he had forgotten to tune his guitar. He began to set the pegs in the face of the waiting public. A string broke and a new one was drawn up amid the titters of the spectators. The song did not please the auditors, who mocked at the singer by humming Spanish fiorituri after him. Boisterous laughter broke out when Figaro came on the stage also with a guitar, and Largo al factotum was lost in the din. Another howl of delighted derision went up when Rosina's voice was heard from within singing Segui, o caro, deh segui così ("Continue, my dear, continue thus"). The audience continued "thus." The representative of Rosina was popular, but the fact that she was first heard in a trifling phrase instead of an aria caused disappointment. The duet between Almaviva and Figaro was sung amid hisses, shrieks and shouts. The cavatina Una voce poco fa got a triple round of applause, however, and Rossini, interpreting the fact as a compliment to the personality of the singer rather than to the music, after bowing to the public, exclaimed: Oh, natura! "Thank her," retorted Giorgi-Righetti; "but for her you would not have had occasion to rise from your chair."

The turmoil began again with the next duet and the finale was mere dumb show. When the curtain fell Rossini faced the mob, shrugged his shoulders and clapped his hands to show his contempt. Only the musicians and singers heard the second act, the din being incessant from beginning to end. Rossini remained imperturbable, and when Giorgi-Righetti, Garcia and Zamboni hastened to his lodgings to offer their condolences as soon as they could don street attire, they found him asleep. The next day he wrote the cavatina Ecco ridente in cielo to take the place of Garcia's unlucky Spanish song, borrowing the air from his own "Aureliano" composed two years before, into which it had been incorporated from "Ciro," a still earlier work. When night came he feigned illness so as to escape the task of conducting. By that time his enemies had worn themselves out. The music was heard amid loud plaudits and in a week the opera had scored a stupendous success.

It is only the student of what was the popular taste in Italian opera at the outset of the nineteenth century who is likely to appreciate the fact that when Rossini achieved his first successes he had to overcome a most virulent opposition to his music because of its innovations. In later years he himself spoke condemnation on Verdi's crass and melodramatic methods, by alluding to him in his bad French as oune mousicienne qui a oune casque! And this was the way Verdi was looked upon even in London fifty or sixty years ago. He was too blatant, too anxious to express emotion, too regardless of suavity in melodic flow, too indifferent to formularies to please the taste fashioned on Paisiello and Cimarosa. In his day Rossini was thought to be all this, and to be anxious to ape the Germans besides. Sixty or seventy years before, Hasse was called "the Saxon" out of compliment, or at least without prejudice. There was then no German style of operatic composition, or if there was, knowledge of the fact had not penetrated so far as Italy. When the Italians called Rossini "Il tedesco," "the German"—it was not out of compliment, but as a term of opprobrium. Even after the battle had been won so signally in Rome, "The Barber's" progress was not at all rapid. For years it followed in the footsteps of Manuel Garcia, who carried it to London in 1818, to Paris in 1819 and to New York in 1825. The first performance in London took place in the King's Theatre on March 10th, 1818. Parke, an oboe player who wrote two volumes of entertaining memoirs, says that it "went off with unbounded applause," and noted the fact, which fell naturally under his observation, that there were striking effects in the wood-wind parts of the accompaniments. The principal singers were Madame Fodor, Garcia, Ambrogetti and Naldi. Despite its success, however, the opera did not win the degree of favor which the other operas of Rossini enjoyed. This, I fancy, was due to a keener appreciation of the spirit of opera seria than of opera buffa. The vicissitudes of the King's Theatre were also at their lowest ebb. Ebers, who succeeded to the management in 1821, did not revive the opera till 1822, which was a Rossini year, only four operas not composed by him being on the list. Yet there is no evidence that "Il Barbiere" was as much liked as "Il Turco in Italia," "La Gazza Ladra," or "Otello," to say nothing of the hit of the season, the oratorio "Mosè in Egitto," which had failed in its original form, but was an overwhelming success when turned into an opera under the title "Pietro l'Eremita." How lightly the obligations to consider the verities of time and local color sat on these old writers! The music which uttered the sentiments of Moses and the children of Israel one day was the next put into the mouths of Peter the Hermit and his contemporaries a few thousand years later. The overture which we now hear as an introduction to "The Barber," and in which fantastic rhapsodists have heard the whispered plotting and merry raillery of Rosina contrasted with the stormings of her grouty guardian, was first the open door to the adventures of the Emperor Aurelian in Palmyra, in the third century of the Christian era, and afterward to Shakespeare's Queen Elizabeth. The music of Almaviva's cavatina, Ecco ridente in cielo, originally resounded from the mouths of Cyrus and his Persians in Babylon. But there is danger of this becoming a digression. We must return to Garcia's wanderings with Figaro's basin.

The Paris performance took place on October 26th, 1819, in the Salle Louvois. Ronzi de Begnis, one of the most beautiful women of her time, was the Rosina, Garcia, of course, the Count Almaviva, Pellegrini the Figaro and De Begnis the Don Basilio. Paër, the composer, who directed, did not like Rossini, and went so far toward encouraging the prejudice aroused by the Paisiello episode, as to revive the original opera, though Paisiello had been dead nearly three years. His scheme blew out at the breech. The French discovered that their taste had left Paisiello in the rear. Rossini profited by the malicious device ultimately, though his opera was at first coldly received. In this period the intermediary between grand opera as it was cultivated in the capitals of Europe and the people of America was a bastard form of entertainment, half play, half opera, of which the chief purveyor was the Englishman, Henry Rowley Bishop. Bishop, a composer himself, was largely active in providing the theatres of London and the provinces with "adaptations" of the works of the masters. He began with Boieldieu's "Jean de Paris" in 1815, and as fast as such operas as "Don Giovanni," "Le Nozze di Figaro" and the like reached London, he "adapted" them for performance by dramatic companies whose members could sing a bit. These "adaptations" came to America with every English singing actor, and the theatrical relationship between the two countries being even more intimate in that day than it is in the present, the new things of London were seldom absent for more than a year from the theatres of New York. So it happened that "The Barber of Seville" was known in New York quite as soon as it was in Paris, and five or six years before Garcia brought "Il Barbiere di Siviglia" across the sea. The medium of its introduction was Thomas Phillipps, who brought it forward at the Park Theatre for his benefit on May 17th, 1819. Phillipps sang the part of Almaviva, and Miss Leesugg, who later became the wife of the comedian Hackett, was the Rosina. On November 21st, 1821, there was another performance for Mr. Phillipps's benefit, and this time Mrs. Holman took the part of Rosina.

The record of Italian opera in America begins with the performance of "Il Barbiere" by the Garcia troupe, newly arrived from London, at the Park Theatre on November 29th, 1825. Four of the seven characters in the opera were personified by members of the Garcia family. Manuel Garcia, father, was Almaviva; Manuel Garcia, son, Figaro; Signora Garcia was Berta, and Signorina Garcia, Rosina. The last it was who soon won renown as Madame Malibran. She was seventeen years old at the time, but artist enough completely to turn the heads of her listeners. "The Signorina," said one impressionable critic, in reviewing her first performance, "seems to us as being a new creation—a cunning pattern of excellent nature equally surprising by the melody of her voice and by the propriety and grace of her acting"; another wrote (the two notices are brought together in Ireland's "Records of the New York Stage"), "Signorina Garcia's voice is what is denominated in the Italian a fine contra-alto; and her science and skill in its management are such as to enable her to run over every tone and semitone of three octaves with an ease and grace that cost apparently no effort. She does not adopt the florid style of her father, but one which is less assuming, and perhaps more proper in a lady and hardly less effective. Her person is about the middle height, slightly embonpoint; her eyes dark, arch and expressive, and a playful smile is almost constantly the companion of her lips. She was the magnet who attracted all eyes and won all hearts." At the time when this was written, Malibran, to call her by the name by which she is known in musical history, had been on the stage not quite six months, having effected her professional début in London in "Il Barbiere" on June 7th, 1825. The other performers at this first representation of the Italian "Barber" were Signor Rosich as Dr. Bartolo, Signor Angrisani as Don Basilio and Signor Crevelli (the younger) as Fiorello. The opera was given complete twenty-three times in seventy-nine nights, opening and closing Garcia's memorable season. The records of the box-office show that its drawing power, expressed in dollars, ranged from $1,843 on the opening night as the maximum, to $356 on the twenty-ninth night as the minimum; but when it was given for the twenty-third time to close the season the original receipts were almost paralleled, the amount being $1,834.

It was an accident which gave to "Il Barbiere" the essentials of a scene which is oftener in the minds of the public when the opera is chattered about in the drawing-room than any other episode in it. When Rossini wrote his opera the activity of publishers was not what it is to-day. An opera might have hundreds of performances without getting into print. Publication, in the modern sense, did not at all enter into the negotiations between manager and composer. The latter delivered his manuscript at a stated time, and when the opera had been prepared, conducted a prescribed number of representations. Then for a period the work belonged to the theatre, in the archives of which the manuscript score and parts were preserved. Composers did not write for immortality, but for the stagione—the season—and were happy when a work outlived the Carnival, the Primavera, or the Quaresima for which it had been written. There was nothing strange, therefore, if entire manuscripts or portions of manuscripts disappeared from the theatrical lumber-room. So it happened that by the time that Rossini's "Barbiere" became a part of the musical assets of the world two of its numbers had been lost. They were the overture, for which an earlier work by the same composer has been substituted, as has already been explained, and a trio which filled the incident now spoken of as the "Lesson Scene." Very welcome, indeed, has the hiatus caused by the loss of the trio been to the Rosinas from the early days, for it has enabled them all to interpolate the piece or pieces in which they appear to the best advantage. Amusing have been the anachronisms which have resulted from these illustrations of artistic conceit and vanity, and diverting glimpses do they give of the tastes and sensibilities of great prime donne. Grisi and Alboni, stimulated by the example of Catalani (though not in this opera), could do nothing nobler than to display their skill by singing Rode's air and variations, a violin piece, in the lesson scene. It grew hackneyed, but nevertheless survived till a later day. Bosio, feeling that variations were necessary, threw Rode's over in favor of those on a polka tune from Alary's "Le Tre Nozze" ("Già della mente involarmi"). Then Madame Gassier ushered in the day of the vocal waltz—Venzano's of amiable memory. Her followers have not yet died out, though Patti substituted Arditi's "Il Bacio" for Venzano's, Madame Sembrich, Strauss's "Voce di primavera," and Madame Melba, Arditi's "Se saran rose." Madame Viardot, with a finer sense of the fitness of things, but forgetful, possibly, or not apprehensive of the fate that befell her father at the first performance of the opera in Rome, introduced a Spanish song. Madame Patti always kept a ready repertory for the scene with a song in the vernacular to bring the enthusiasm of her auditors to a climax and an end—"Home, Sweet Home" in New York and London, "Solovei" in St. Petersburg. Usually she began with the bolero from "Les Vêpres Siciliennes," or the Shadow Dance from "Dinorah." Qui dit Rosina, pense Patti, wrote Von Lenz long ago, and many there be among the older opera-goers of to-day who find the saying apposite. Madame Sembrich, living in a period when the style of song of which she and Madame Melba are now the brightest exemplars, is not as familiar as it used to be, has also found it necessary to have an extended list of pieces to satisfy the public. She may sing Proch's Air and Variations, but it will only be followed by a demand for more; let her supplement it with "Ah! non giunge" from "La Sonnambula," the bolero from "Les Vêpres Siciliennes," "O, luce di quest' anima" from "Linda," or the vocalized waltz from Strauss—still the applause remains riotous and yields only when the Spanish lady of the last century sits down to a pianoforte of this and sings Chopin's "Maiden's Wish" in Polish to her own accompaniment. As for Madame Melba, not to be set in the shade simply because Madame Sembrich is almost as good a pianist as she is a singer, she supplements Arditi's waltz, "Se saran rose," or Massenet's "Sevillana" with Tosti's "Mattinata," to which she also plays an accompaniment.

The story of the opera is simplicity itself. Dr. Bartolo, a crusty old fellow, is guardian of the fascinating Rosina. He hopes to win her consent to become his wife, and to save her from the attentions of others keeps extremely strict watch and ward over her. But the old proposition remains true: "Love laughs at locksmiths." The Count Almaviva has seen her, and her charms have bewitched him. Rosina herself feels a strong inclination for the swain who is known to her only by the name of Lindoro. Almaviva, to further his suit, and in the hope of obtaining an interview, follows Proteus's advice in "The Two Gentlemen of Verona," and visits his lady's chamber with a "sweet consort." Enter Figaro, the town factotum, who is promptly enlisted in an enterprise which has for its end the introduction of the lover into the house in which Dr. Bartolo keeps his ward a prisoner. Twice the precautions of the jealous old guardian are rendered inutile. Almaviva comes in the guise of a drunken soldier who claims to have been billeted upon the Doctor; he manages to make himself known to his inamorata, exchanges letters with her, but only escapes arrest at the end by making himself known to a body of soldiery who were about to carry him off. By the sudden change in their attitude toward the rude intruder, Dr. Bartolo is "astonied" and becomes the object of Figaro's pranks. Next the lover dons the hat and gown of a music master and gets into the presence of his mistress on the pretence that her teacher, Don Basilio, is ill and has asked him to take his place. The real Basilio comes, and there is a moment of confusion, from which Figaro relieves the lovers by persuading Basilio that he is really ill with a raging fever and bundling him out of the room. Figaro obtains the key of the balcony, and a midnight elopement is planned, but is frustrated by the discovery that the ladder leading from the balcony to the ground has been carried away. Meanwhile, Bartolo, having obtained Rosina's promise to marry him, arranges for the notary's visit. That official, however, is persuaded by Figaro to draw up and attend to the attestation of a marriage agreement between Count Almaviva and Rosina, and finding that all his precautions have been useless, Bartolo gives his blessing to the young people.

Nº 1. "Piano, pianissimo."

Introduction.

Time of the action, near dawn; place, an open square in Seville. At the left the house of Bartolo, its windows having practicable bars and closed blinds, which can be unlocked and locked at the proper time. Fiorello, lantern in hand, ushers in a number of musicians with their instruments. Later, Count Almaviva, wrapped in a cloak.

Nº 17. Storm.

From the windows flashes of lightning are seen, and thunder is heard throughout this movement. When the storm subsides the shutters are opened from without, and Figaro, followed by the Count, enters by the window; they are both wrapped in cloaks, and Figaro carries a lantern.
