Notes and Translations

Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach
1714-1788

MAGNIFICAT
1750
text taken from Luke 1:46-55, from the Vulgate (the 4th century, authorized Roman Catholic Latin translation of the Bible); besides these verses a Magnificat (the canticle of the Virgin) traditionally includes two additional verses of the Lesser Doxology "Gloria Patri et Filio"

Composed 1749. Possibly first performed 1750, at Thomaskirche, Leipzig. The trumpet, timpani, and horn parts were added later to the original scoring.

Fecit potentiam

Fecit potentiam in brachio suo:	He has shown the might of his arm:
dispersit superbos mente cordis sui.	he scatters those with proud minds from one another.

Johann Sebastian Bach
1685-1750

MAGNIFICAT
BWV 243a and 243
1723
text taken from Luke 1:46-55, from the Vulgate (the 4th century, authorized Roman Catholic Latin translation of the Bible); besides these verses a Magnificat (the canticle of the Virgin) traditionally includes two additional verses of the Lesser Doxology "Gloria Patri et Filio"

Composed for Bach's first Christmas in Leipzig. It was later revised (c1728-1731) and transposed from E-flat to D. The revision replaces recorders with flutes and omits 4 interpolated hymns (laudes), which had previously rendered the text appropriate to the Christmas season. The revised Magnificat was possibly first performed July 2, 1733 for the Feast of the Visitation of Mary. The Magnificat was sung in German for Sunday vespers, and in Latin on Christmas Day.

Quia fecit mihi magna

The aria is scored for continuo.

Quia fecit mihi magna qui potens est	For he to me is mighty who has done great things
et sanctum nomen ejus.	and holy is his name.

Dates throughout are for first performances unless otherwise noted. The bracketed aria titles are those used when performing the singing English translation found in the musical score. The notes in this section are by the editor.

MASS IN B MINOR

composed 1724-1740s
text is the traditional Latin Mass from the Roman Catholic liturgy

Not initially conceived as a unity, the different sections of what would eventually be the Mass in B minor were composed over a period of perhaps as much as 25 years. The Sanctus was composed in 1724 and first performed on Christmas Day in that year at Thomaskirche, Leipzig. The Kyrie and Gloria sections, comprising what was then known as the Missa in Lutheran terminology, were composed and first performed in 1733, probably in Dresden. At some later point Bach composed the remaining sections with the result of a complete traditional mass. The sources are unclear, and there is disagreement about the dates of composition for the Credo, Osanna, Benedictus, Agnus Dei, and Dona nobis pacem. Among the new composition there was some significant borrowing of music from earlier works. Bach's work to complete the mass was probably done in the 1740s, with theories that put it as late as 1748 or 1749, which would make the Mass in B minor perhaps the composer's last major composition. (The Art of the Fugue was probably principally composed early in the decade.) Earlier historical theories stated that these remaining sections were composed at different times, primarily in the 1730s, and that Bach assembled the mass into a whole near the end of his life. The first performance of the complete work was in 1859 in Leipzig.

Et in Spiritum sanctum

From the Credo section, scored for 2 oboe d'amores and continuo.

Et in Spiritum sanctum	And in the Holy Spirit
Dominum et vivificantem,	Lord and giver of life,
qui ex Patre Filioque procedit;	who from the Father as a Son proceeds;
qui cum Patre et Filio simul	who with the Father and the Son together
adoratur et conglorificatur;	is adored and glorified;
qui locutus est per Prophetas.	who spoke by the prophets.
Et unam sanctam catholicam	And one holy catholic et apostolicam ecclesiam.	and apostolic church.

PASSIO SECUNDUM JOANNEM

(Johannes-Passion/St. John Passion)
BWV 245
libretto based primarily on Der für die Sünden der Welt gemarterte und sterbende Jesus (Jesus tortured and dying for the sins of the world) by Barthold Heinrich Brockes (1712), with some additional free texts from a 1704 Passion libretto by Christian Heinrich Postel (free text refers to poetry that is not an adaptation or paraphrase of Scripture), with adaptations and additional material by the composer

Composed in 1723, the Passion was first performed on Good Friday, April 7, 1724 at Thomaskirche, Leipzig. The piece was revised, with additions, deletions and substitutions, for performances in 1725, but basically restored to the original version for performances in c1730 and 1740. A Passion is a musical setting of Jesus' sufferings and death as related by one of the four Gospel writers. Brockes' libretto, cited above, was the most often set of Passion librettos by composers in the 18th century.

Betrachte, meine Seel' [Consider, O my soul]

From Part II (no. 31), scored for 2 viole d'amore, lute, bassoon and continuo. This is a free text from Brockes' libretto. The aria was replaced with "Ach, windet euch nicht so" in the 1725 revision.

Betrachte, meine Seel'	Consider, my soul,
mit ängstlichem Vergnügen,	with anxious willingness,
mit bitt'rer Lust	with sharp desire
und halb beklemmt von Herzen,	and half consticted heart,
dein höchstes Gut	your highest blessing
in Jesu Schmerzen,	in Jesus' pains,
wie dir auf Dornen, so ihn stechen,	for you from the thorns that pierce him,
die Himmelsschlüsselblumen blüh'n,	the heavenly flowers bloom!
du kannst viel süsse Frucht	you can much sweet fruit
von seiner Wermut brechen,	from his wormwood pluck,
drum sieh ohn Unterlass auf Ihn!	therefore look without ceasing upon Him!

PASSIO SECUNDUM MATTHÆUM

(Matthäus-Passion/St. Matthew Passion)
BWV 244
1727 or 1729
libretto by Picander, a pseudonym for Christian Friedrich Henrici (1700-1764); it is probable that the free text poems only were by Henrici (free text refers to poetry that is not a paraphrase or adaptation directly from Scripture), with adapted biblical narrative from the Gospel of Matthew and some chorale texts by the composer

The date of first performance of the Passion is in dispute, occuring at Thomaskirche, Leipzig, on either April 11, 1727 or April 15, 1729. A revised version was performed March 30, 1736. A Passion is a musical setting of Jesus' sufferings and death as related by one of the four Gospel writers.

Gerne will ich mich bequemen [Gladly would I be enduring]

From Part I (nos. 28-29), scored for strings and continuo. The aria is a free text of Jesus in the Garden of Gethsemane.

Der Heiland fällt vor seinem Vater nieder,	The Savior falls low before the Father, dadurch erhebt er mich und alle von unserm Falle	thereby to raise me and all of us fallen people
hinauf zu Gottes Gnade wieder.	up to God's grace again.
Er ist bereit, den Kelch,	He is prepared, the cup
des Todes Bitterkeit zu trinken,	of death's bitterness to drink, in welchen Sünden dieser Welt gegossen sind	in which the sins of this world are poured
und hässlich stinken,	and hideously stinks,
weil es dem lieben Gott gefällt.	because the loving God willed it.
Gerne will ich mich bequemen	Gladly will I submit
Kreuz und Becher anzunehmen,	cross and chalice to partake, trink ich doch dem Heiland nach.	drink I as the Saviour did.
Denn sein Mund,	By his mouth
der mit Milch und Honig fliesset,	which with milk and honey flows,
hat den Grund und des Leidens	has earth and its sorrow's
herbe Schmach	harsh humiliation
durch den ersten Trunk versüsset.	through the first drink sweetened.

Komm, süsses Kreuz [Come, healing cross]

From Part II (nos. 65-66). The recitative is scored for flutes, gamba, and continuo; the aria is scored for gamba and continuo. A free text, commenting on the procession as Simon of Cyrene carries the cross for Jesus.

Ja! freilich will	Yes! certainly will
in uns das Fleisch und Blut	in us the flesh and blood
zum Kreuz gezwungen sein;	to the cross be compelled;
je mehr es unsrer Seele gut,	as more it for our soul is good,
je herber geht es ein.	so harsher goes it for one.
Komm, süsses Kreuz,	Come, sweet cross,
so will ich sagen,	so will I say,
mein Jesu,	my Jesus,
gib es immer her!	give it always to me!
Wird mir mein Leiden einst zu schwer,	If my sorrow becomes too difficult for me,
so hilf du mir es selber tragen.	then you will help me to bear it.

Mache dich, mein Herze, rein [Make thee clean, my heart]

From Part II (nos. 74-75). The recitative is scored for strings and continuo; the aria is scored for strings, oboe da caccia, and continuo. Both recitative and aria are free texts, coming just after the death of Jesus in the Passion.

Am Abend, da es kühle war,	On the evening when it was cool,
ward Admas Fallen offenbar.	was Adam's fall manifest;
am Abend drücket ihn der Heiland nieder;	on the evening he pushed the Savior low;
am Abend kam die Taube wieder	on the evening came the dove again
und trug ein Oelblatt in dem Munde.	and bore and olive leaf in its mouth.
O schöne Zeit! O Abendstunde!	O beautiful time! O evening hour!
Der Friedensschluss ist nun mit Gott gemacht,	the key to peace is only made with God,
denn Jesus hat sein Kreuz vollbracht.	because Jesus has His cross endured.
Sein Leichnam kommt zur Ruh.	His corpse came to rest.
Ach, liebe Seele, bitte du, geh,	O, beloved soul, ask you, go,
lasse dir den toten Jesum schenken,	allow you the dead Jesus to bestow,
o heilsames, o köstlich's Angedenken!	o healing, o blessed memory!
Mache dich, mein Herze, rein,	Make you, my heart, pure,
ich will Jesum selbst begraben,	I will Jesus in myself entomb,
denn er soll nunmehr	then he shall henceforth
in mir für und für	in me for eternity
seine süsse Ruhe haben.	his sweet rest have.
Welt, geh aus, lass Jesum ein!	World, go out, allow Jesus in!

WEIHNACHTS-ORATORIUM

(Christmas Oratorio)
BWV 248
1734-1735
text attributed to Picander, a pseudonym for Christian Friedrich Henrici (1700-1764); based on Luke 2:1, 3-12, and Matthew 1:1-12 (the Luther German Bible)

The Weihnachts-Oratorium is actually a collection of six individual church cantatas, designed to be performed at each of the six church events between Christmas and Epiphany. The piece contains newly composed music, and adaptations from three secular cantatas (BWV 213-215). The first cantata was first performed on Christmas Day, 1734 at Thomaskirche, Leipzig. The remaining cantatas followed in order on the second and third days following Christmas, on New Year's Day (Feast of the Circumcision), on the Sunday after New Year, and on the Feast of the Epiphany. Performances took place at both Thomaskirche and Nikolaikirche, Leipzig.

Grosser Herr und starker König [Mighty Lord and King all glorious]

From Part I (the first cantata), Christmas Day. Scored for trumpet, flute, strings, continuo.

Grosser Herr, und starker König,	Great Lord, o mighty king,
liebster Heiland	beloved Savior
o wie wenig achtest du der Erden Pracht!	o how little do you regard earthly splendor!
Der die ganze Welt erhält,	He who preserves the entire world,
ihre Pracht und Zier er schaffen,	its splendor and decoration created,
muss in harten Krippen schlafen.	must in a rough manger sleep.

Hector Berlioz
1803-1869

L'ENFANCE DU CHRIST
(The Childhood of Christ)
Opus 25
libretto by the composer, based on the Matthew 2, augmented by legend and invention

Composed 1850-1854. The composer called the piece a trilogie sacrée (sacred trilogy). Part I, "Le songe d'Hérode" (Herod's Dream), was composed in 1854. Part II, "La fuite en Egypte" (The Flight into Egypt), was composed 1850, revised 1852. This section was premiered in 1850 under the pseudonym of Pierre Ducré, which Berlioz claimed was a prank. When published in 1852, this section was cited as being "attributed to Pierre Ducré, imaginary chapel master." Part III, "L'arrivée à Saïs" (The Arrival at Sais), was composed in 1853. The story, based on a skeletal biblical foundation from Matthew 2, is of Herod and his pursuit of the infant Jesus, and the holy family's flight into Egypt. The score contains stage directions explaining the events portrayed.

O misère des rois!

The aria, from Part I, is sung by the bass role of Herod, alone at night in his palace, restless and frightful over a dream he has had. Herod's dream is an invention by Berlioz, and not mentioned in Scripture.

Toujours ce rêve!	Always this dream!
encore cet enfant	again that child
Qui doit me détrôner!	who can dethrone me!
Et ne savoir que croire	And only to be able to believe
De ce présage menaçant	this menacing omen
Pour ma vie et ma gloire!	for my life and my glory!
O misère des rois!	O misery of kings!
Régner et ne pas vivre!	To reign and not to live!
A tous donner des lois,	To give up all leisure
Et désirer de suivre	and to desire to follow
Le chevrier au fond des bois!	the goatherd after all through the forest!
O nuit profonde	O dead of night
Qui tiens le monde	who your people
Dans le repos plongé,	into rest plunge,
A mon sein ravagé	to my ravaged breast
Donne la paix une heure,	give one hour of peace,
Et que ton voile effleure	and if your veil brushes
Mon front d'ennuis chargé!	my brow between responsibilities!
Effort stérile!	Sterile effort!
Le sommeil fuit;	The escape of sleep;
Et ma plainte inutile	and my useless lamentation
Ne hâte point ton cours,	hurries not your course,
Interminable nuit!	endless night!

REQUIEM
Opus 48
1888
text from the traditional Latin Requiem Mass of the Roman Catholic liturgy; Requiem ("rest") is a Mass for the dead

The manuscript is dated 1887. First performance at the Church of the Madeleine, Paris, January 16, 1888. Revisions and additions made 1887-1890 and in 1893. The first version (scored for violas, cellos, basses, harp, timpani, organ, and violin solo) included a boy choir and boy soloist, and consisted of five movements: Introit et Kyrie, Sanctus, Pie Jesu, Agnus Dei, and In Paradisum. The 1893 version adds the Offertoire and Libera me and includes adult soloists and brass. The 1900 revision and orchestration expands to full orchestra, adding more strings as well as woodwinds. Fauré's Requiem does not conform to the liturgical requirements of the Roman Catholic Church. The Dies Irae is omitted, except for the last two lines, which appear as the Pie Jesu.

Hostias

Hostias et preces Tibi	Sacrifice and prayer to you
Domine Laudis offerimus	Lord in praise we offer
ta suscipe pro animabus illis	receive them for the souls
quarum hodie memoriam facimus,	who this day we remember,
fac eas Domine	grant oh Lord
de morte transire ad vitam	that they from death pass to life
quam olim Abrahae promisisti	as it was to Abraham promised et semini ejus.	and to his seed.

ALEXANDER'S FEAST
1736
libretto by Newburgh Hamilton, adapted from John Dryden's "Second Ode to St. Cecilia," and also includes sections of Hamilton's earlier work "The Power of Music"

First performed February 19, 1736, London. Revisions in 1737, 1739, 1742, 1751, 1753, and 1755. The character of Timotheus is a minstrel who sings stories to King Alexander; these stories comprise the bulk of the narrative for the oratorio, the theme of which is to show the power of music.

Revenge, Timotheus cries

BELSHAZZAR
1745
libretto by Charles Jennens, based on Daniel 5, Jeremiah 19, Isaiah 44-45, and history

Composed August - September, 1744, and first performed in London March 27, 1745, King's Theatre, Haymarket. The story is during the reign of Belshazzar, king of Babylon, and his defeat by Cyrus, leading to the release of the Jewish captives, including the prophet Daniel.

Behold the monstrous human beast

From Act I, scene 2. Gobrias, a Babylonian, describes the feast of Sesach, where Belshazzar and his court indulge in drunkeness. Because the bass in this role was not up to the aria's vocal demands, it was transposed for a tenor for the first performance.

JOSHUA

1748
libretto by Thomas Morell (1703-1784), based on the book of Joshua Composed July and August, 1747. First performance took place March 9, 1748 at the Theatre Royal at Covent Garden, London. The oratorio tells the story of the Jewish conquest of Canaan under the leadership of Joshua.

See the raging flames arise

From Act II. Caleb describes the scene after the walls of Jericho have collapsed.

JUDAS MACCABÆUS

libretto by Thomas Morell (1703-1784), based on the book of the Maccabees and the twelfth book of Josephus' Antiquities of the Jews

Commissioned by Frederic, Prince of Wales. First performed at the Theatre Royal at Covent Garden, London, April 1, 1747. Revisions and additions were made for frequent new productions, in 1748, then annually from 1750, through 1759. The oratorio relates the restoration of liberty to the Jews under leader Judas Maccabæus.

Arm, arm, ye brave!

From Act I. Simon is inspired by God to choose his brother as the new leader of the Israelites

MESSIAH

text by Charles Jennens (1700-1773), drawn from various biblical sources and the Prayer Book Psalter

Composed between August 22 and September 12, 1741. First performed April 13, 1742 at the Music Hall on Fishamble Street, Dublin. The performance was a benefit for several of the city's charities. The libretto is drawn from the Prophets, the Gospels, the Pauline Epistles, and Revelation, detailing the prophecy of Christ's coming, his life, death resurrection, promise of second coming, and the response of believers. Messiah is theological in nature, not the more common dramatic Handelian oratorio. The soloists are impersonal, and the chorus assumes an expanded role as commentators. Many changes and additions were made in the oratorio, with 13 revisions of the score in the years 1743-1759. Many of the solo movements were sometimes sung by different voice types in different versions and keys, a practice the composer directed.

Thus saith the Lord; But who may abide

From Part I. The text is based on Malachi 3:2. The aria is presented in the original version for bass in this anthology edition, which does not contain the familiar prestissimo middle section (added in a later version for the castrato alto Gaetano Guadagni).

For behold, darkness shall cover the earth; The people that walked in darkness

From Part I. The recitative text comes from Isaiah 9:2-3. The aria text is based on Isaiah 9:2.

Why do the nations

From Part II. The text comes from Psalm 11:1-2. The aria is presented in its original form, which has become the standard version. Handel later abridged the aria by about half, with a recitative ending, apparently to accommodate an inadequate singer.

The trumpet shall sound

From Part III. The text for the recitative is taken from I Corinthians 15:51-52. The aria's text comes from verses 52 and 53 of the same chapter.

SAMSON

libretto adapted by Newburgh Hamilton from Milton's Samson Agonistes and other poems

Composed 1741. First performed February 18, 1743, at the Theatre Royal at Covent Garden, London. Additions and revisions were made for performances in 1745 and 1754. The oratorio relates the story from Judges, with the addition of the character of Micah.

Thy glorious deeds inspir'd my tongue

From Act I. Manoa, Samson's father, recalls his son's military accomplishments and laments Samson's sins.

Honor and arms

From Act II, scene 4. The character of the Philistine Harapha boasts that fighting the blinded Samson is beneath him ("so mean a triumph I disdain").

Franz Joseph Haydn

1732-1809

DIE JAHRESZEITEN

(The Seasons)

1801

libretto by Baron Gottfried van Swieten after "The Seasons," a lengthy pastoral poem by James Thomson, translated into German by Barthold Heinrich Brockes Begun in 1799, the oratorio was first performed May 20, 1801. Under Haydn's direction and consent, a singing English translation by Swieten (adapting the original poem by Thomson) was included in the first edition of the oratorio, published in 1802 by Breikopf & Härtel. (A German-French edition was also released at the same time.) The first aria below is from Spring, the second from Winter.

Schon eilet froh der Akkermann	[With joy th'impatient husbandman]
Vom Widder strahlet jetzt	From Aries beams now
die helle Sonn auf uns herab.	the shining sun down on us.
Nun weichen Frost und Dampf	Now gentle frost and mist
und schweben laue Dünst umher;	and lukewarm vapors float about;
der Erde Busen ist gelöst;	the earth's bosom is freed;
erhheitert ist die Luft.	brighter is the air.
Schon eilet froh der Ackermann	Already hurries joyful the husbandman
zur Arbeit auf das Feld,	to work in the field,
in langen Furchen schreitet er	in long furrows he strides
dem Pfluge flötend nach.	whistling behind the plow.
In abgemessnem Gange dann	In measured motion then
wirft er den Samen aus,	throws he the seeds out,
den birgt der Akker treu	is sheltered by the faithful earth
und reift ihn bald	and ripens soon
zur gold'nen Frucht.	to golden harvest.

Erblikke hier, betörter Mensch	[In this, O vain, misguided man]
Vom dürren Osten dringt	From the parched east presses forth
ein scharfer Eishauch jetzt hervor.	a sharp icy gale now.
Schneidend fährt er durch die Luft,	It travels cutting through the air,
verzehret jeden Dunst	consumes every vapor
und hascht des Tieres Odem selbst.	and seizes the animals' breath.
Des grimmigen Tyranns,	The tyrant's fury,
des Winters Sieg ist nun vollbracht	winter's conquest is now completed
und stummer Schrecken drückt	and silent terror afflicts
den ganzen Umfang der Natur.	the whole sphere of nature.
Erblicke hier, betörter Mensch,	Behold here, deluded man,
erblicke deines Lebens Bild!	behold your life's image!
Verblühet ist dein kurzer Lenz,	Bleeding to death is your short spring,
erschöpfet deines Sommers Kraft.	drained your summer's strength.
Schon welkt dein Herbst dem Alter zu,	Already withered of age is your autumn harvest
schon naht der bleiche Winter sich	already the pale winter nears you
und zeiget dir das offne Grab.	and exhibits your open grave.
Wo sind sie nun, die hoh'n Entwürfe,	Where are they now, the high plans,
die Hoffnungen vom Glück,	the hopes for prosperity,
die Sucht nach eitlem Ruhme,	the longing after conceited fame,
der Sorgen schwere Last?	sorrow's heavy burden?
Wo sind sie nun, die Wonnetage,	Where are they now, the delightful days,
verschwelgt in Üppigkeit?	indulged in luxury?
Und wo die frohen Nächte,	And where the joyful nights
im Tauel durchgewacht?	in giddiness awake all night?
Wo sind sie nun? wo?	Where are they now? Where?
Verschwunden sind sie wie ein Traum.	Hazy are they like a dream.
Nur Tugend bleibt.	Only virtue remains.
Die bleibt allein	It remains alone
und leitet uns, unwandelbar,	and leads us away unchanging,
durch Zeit und Jahreswechsel,	through time and the years' changes,
durch Jammer oder Freude	through misery or joy
bis zu dem höchsten Ziele hin.	until we reach the highest destination.

DIE SCHÖPFUNG
Ein Oratorium für jeden Geschmack und jede Zeit

THE CREATION
An Oratorio for All Tastes and Times 1798
libretto attributed to T. Linley or Lidley (sources are unclear about his name), translated from the original English to German and abridged by Baron Gottfried van Swieten, based on chapters from Genesis, selected Psalms, and paraphrases of Milton's Paradise Lost Composition began in 1796. A first, private performance of the oratorio was given April 30, 1798 at the Schwartzenberg Palais (preceded by an open rehearsal April 29). The first public performance was given March 19, 1799. Haydn composed the piece in German, but the English version followed quickly, being basically the original libretto adapted by Swieten. (One of the primary manuscript scores used by Haydn to conduct has both German and English.) English was included in the first published edition, 1800. Since it was the composer's intention that the piece be heard in English in English-speaking countries, in the editor's opinion that is the appropriate language in those locales.

In 1801 Haydn composed a Mass in B-flat that is known as Schöpfungmesse (Creation Mass), but this piece is entirely different from the oratorio Die Schöpfung. (In the "qui tollis" of the mass Haydn quotes from the oratorio Die Schöpfung.)

Rollend in schäumenden Wellen [Rolling in foaming billows]

Und Gott sprach:
Es sammle sich das Wasser
unter dem Himmel zusammen an einem Platz, und es erscheine das trockne Land;
und es war so.
Und Gott nannte das trockne Land:
Erde, und die Sammlung
der Wasser nannte er Meer, und Gott sah, und es gut war.

And God spoke:
Collect the water
under heaven together in one place,
and let the dry land appear;
and it was so.
And God called the dry land:
Earth, and the collection of the water he called sea, and God saw, and it was good.

Rollend in schäumenden Wellen bewegt sich ungestüm das Meer.
Hügel und Felsen erscheinen der Berge
Gipfel steigt empor.
Der Fläche, weit gedehnt,
durchläuft der breite
Strom in mancher Krümme.
Leise rauschend gleitet fort im stillen Thal der helle Bach.

Rolling in foaming waves
agitates the turbulent sea.
Hills and rocks appear as the mountain peaks rise up.
Through the plains, stretched wide, runs the broad river with many windings.
Gently rushing glides away through silent fields the clear brook.

Nun scheint in vollem Glanze der Himmel [Now heaven in fullest glory shown]

Gleich öffnet sich der Erde Schoss, und sie gebiert auf Gottes Wort Geschöpfe jeder Art, in vollem Wuchs und ohne Zahl.
Vor Freude brüllend steht der Löwer da.
Hier schiesst der gelenkige Tiger empor.
Das zack'ge Haupt erhebt
der schnelle Hirsch.
Mit fliegender Mähne springt und wieh'rt voll Mut und Kraft das edle Ross.
Auf grünen Matten weidet schon das Rind,
in Heerden abgetheilt.
Die Triften deckt als wie gesät,
das wollenreiche, sanfte Schaaf.
Wie Staub verbreitet sich im Schwarm und Wirbel
das Heer der Insekten.
In langen Zügen kriecht
am Boden das Gewürm.

As though opening the earth's womb and bears God's Word creatures of every kind in full growth and without number.
Roaring with joy stands the lion there.
Here leaps the supple tiger upwards.
The jagged head of the
the swift stag raises up.
With flowing mane springs and neights
the noble horse full of courage and strength.
In green alpine meadows graze the cows,
in herds distributed.
The pastures are covered as it is said
with the wooly, gentle sheep.
Like dust spreads itself
in swarm and whirl
the host of insects.
In long processions crawl
on the ground the worms.

Nun scheint in vollem Glanze der Himmel.
Nun prangt in ihrem Schmucke die Erde.
Die Luft erfüllt das leichte Gefieder, die Wasser schwellt der Fische Gewimmel;
der Boden drückt der Tiere Last.
Doch war noch Alles nicht vollbracht Dem Ganzen fehlte das Geschöpf, das Gottes Werke dankbar seh'n,
des herren Gute preisen soll.

Now shines in fullest splendor the heaven.
Now is the earth resplendant in its decoration.
The air is full of light plumage,
the water swells with swarming fish;
the ground is trod by the animals' weight.
However was not all complete.
It lacks the creature,
who God's work grateful sees,
who the Lord's goodness shall praise.

ELIJAH
(Elias)
Opus 70
1846
libretto by Julius Schubring, after I Kings 17-19, II Kings 2, and other biblical passages; English libretto by William Bartholomew

Composed summer of 1846. First performed August 26, 1846, at the Birmingham Festival in England. William Bartholomew was given the Elijah libretto in the middle of May, 1846, and was engaged to translate it into English for the August premiere, receiving sections as they were completed. Mendelssohn and Schubring had used Luther's translation of the Bible, interpolating and paraphrasing liberally. Bartholomew's task was not only to translate, but also to make the text agree with the King James Bible. He added the following disclaimer to the libretto of Elijah: "The author of this English version has endeavored to render it as nearly in accordance with the Scriptural Texts as the Music to which it is adapted will admit: the references are therefore to be considered rather as authorities than quotations."

The arias are presented in both English, the language of the premiere, and German, the working language of Mendelssohn's composition. It was clearly the composer's intention that English speaking audiences hear the piece in the vernacular.

Lord God of Abraham (Herr Gott Abrahams)

From Part I. Just after the chorus has dramatically called to Baal, the pagan god, to hear and answer, Elijah interrupts the silence with this prayer to the Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel.

Is not his word like a fire? (Ist nicht des Herrn Wort wie ein Feuer?)

From Part I. Elijah's fiery sermon about God's righteous anger against allegiance to pagan gods, coming just after the chorus sings "Take all the prophets of Baal, and let not one of them escape us, bring all, and slay them!"

It is enough! (Es ist genug!)

From Part II. Elijah has been threatened with revenge by Jezebel, and to save himself has taken refuge in the wilderness, where he laments his cowardice.

For the mountains shall depart (Ja, es sollen wohl Berge weichen)

From Part II. Elijah's final words of peace before being taken up to heaven in a whirlwind of fire.

PAULUS
(St. Paul)
1836 libretto by J. Schubring, after the Acts of the Apostles

Composition began in 1834. The oratorio was originally commissioned for the St. Cecilia Society in Frankfurt, but because of the presenter's illness, the premiere was instead given at the Düsseldorf Festival (for which Mendelssohn was a director) on May 22, 1836. The piece was heavily revised for the first published edition (1837, Novello), which contained German and English. The revised Paulus was performed in March of 1837 in Frankfurt.

Gott sei mir gnädig [O God, have mercy]

Gott sei mir gnädig	God to me be merciful

MESSA DI GLORIA 1880
text is the traditional Latin Mass from the Roman Catholic liturgy

Composed in 1880 as Puccini's final exam at the conservatory at Lucca. The mass also contains a Mottetto and a Credo that date from 1878. First performed July 12, 1880, Lucca, on the feast-day of St. Paulino (the patron saint of bells).

MESSE SOLENNELLE
text is the traditional Latin Mass from the Roman Catholic liturgy

Composed in 1863, first performed in Paris, March 14, 1864, for the dedication of the private chapel of Countess Louise Pillet-Will. This original version was for 4 soloists, a chorus of 8 voices, 2 pianos and harmonium. The piece is often called "Petite Messe Solennelle," referring to the chamber music scale of the design, not because of brevity or liturgical reasons. Revised in 1867 for full orchestra; revision performed in Paris, February 24, 1869.

Quoniam tu solus sanctus

Quoniam tu solus sanctus, Tu solus Dominus,	For you alone are holy, You alone are Lord,
Tu solus altisimus Jesu Christe.	You alone are most high Jesus Christ.

STABAT MATER

1832; 1842

text is traditional Latin from the Roman Catholic liturgy, a 13th century sequence attributed to the Franciscon Jacopone da Todi

First performed on Good Friday, 1833 at Cappella di San Filippo El Real, Madrid. Due to illness, Rossini requested that Giovanni Tadolini compose six of the twelve sections in order to complete the work for the premiere. In 1841 Rossini replaced the six Tadolini movements with new composition. The revised Stabat Mater was first performed January 7, 1842 at the Théâtre Italien, Paris. Stabat Mater (literally translated as "mother standing") refers to Mary standing at the base of the cross.

Pro peccatis

Pro peccatis suæ gentis vidit Jesum in tormentis,	In place of mankind she saw Jesus in torment
et flagellis subditum.	and scourged in the their place.
Vidit suum dulcem natum morientem desolatum	Saw her sweet child dying forsaken
dum emisit spiritum.	until he sent forth his spirit.

Giuseppe Verdi

1813-1901

MESSA DI REQUIEM

1874

text is the traditional Latin Requiem Mass from the Roman Catholic liturgy; Requiem ("rest") is a Mass for the dead

The piece has a long history of development. In November, 1868, Verdi sent his publisher, Ricordi, a letter proposing a Requiem Mass, written by Italian composers, to honor Rossini, who had died early in the month. There was to be one performance only, on the first anniversary of Rossini's death, and no one was to profit from the work. Verdi was assigned the "Libera me" section of the mass, and completed composition in August. Severe conflicts and controversies prevented the "Rossini Requiem" from being presented. (It wasn't heard until 1988 at the Parma Cathedral.) In 1873 the Italian novelist Alessandro Manzoni died. Verdi proposed to Ricordi that he would write a Requiem in honor of Manzoni, and like the "Rossini Requiem," wanted to have the first performance on the first anniversary of Manzoni's death. Verdi incorporated the "Libera me" section that he had composed five years earlier. The Messa di Requiem was first performed May 22, 1874 at the Church of San Marco, Milan.
